

About Maggie

Maggie Ott award winning professional artist teaches basic and intermediate transparent watercolor.

Ott has had most of her artistic training in New Jersey and studied with numerous local and international artists. She is very vocal in her feelings that to be a good teacher, one must be a good student, so she takes every opportunity to learn.

Her most reason studies have been in North Carolina with Chuck MacLachlin and Sterling Edwards from whom she was fortunate enough to learn things that she feels have simplified the watercolor process and taught her new techniques.

She teaches each student on their own level with step by step instructions and a no holes barred approach.

maggie teaches the importance of value in painting and starts work with a black and white value sketch, then a one color value study before completing the finished work.

Her classes are enjoyable and progressive with students completing work that they will be proud enough to hang, use as gifts or sell.

Many of her students enter exhibits, win awards and sell their work.

Maggie believes that her job is to teach every method she knows so that each student can reach into their souls to find their own creative talent.

New to Delmarva, Maggie teaches class at the Art Institute and Gallery, the Wicomico Civic Center, The Dorchester Art Center and Rehoboth Art League. She is also a member of the Art League of Ocean City and the St. Michael's Art Guild. She exhibits her work at The Step Above gallery and the Worchester Arts Council in Berlin.

Before she started teaching, Maggie had a solo show in Dorchester and The Art Institute and Gallery and has won awards in Salisbury and Ocean City, Md

She teaches 2 and 3 day workshops in New Jersey in Ocean City and Galloway.
